Queering and Debinarizing the Spanish Language

April 15 from 12-1pm

tinyurl.com/QueeringSpanish

Unlearning, de-centering and languaging for inclusion. Let's talk about the ways in which Spanish is evolving and how the use of direct nonbinary Spanish (described as a change in progress by linguist Ártemis Lopez) is at the heart of identity construction and visibility for many in the Queer community. Join us in a discussion about cultivating brave spaces and equitable language praxis.

Françoise is an anti-bias educator and social justice activist currently living and working on unceded Lenape territory aka the city of Philadelphia. She is a speaker, a writer, a coach, a teacher of teachers, and a consultant. She is a proud Chilean immigrant who has spoken about the struggles, complexities and nuances of identity at The Race Institute and The Barnes Foundation. She engages and interacts with an international community of educators by sharing critical consciousness educational bits, best decolonial practices, and self-made resources through social media as "The Woke Spanish Teacher."
