Last Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., in the cafeteria Alpha Chi Lambda, the local MCC chapter of the Phi Theta Kappa International Honor Society, held a banner-signing event for all MCC students. The significance of signing the banner was for students to commit to completing their education goals at the college, whether that be AA degree or a certificate program.

Over 100 students signed the banner, and with their signing they received a green "PTK Commit to Complete" wristband and a cookie. Those who manned the banner-signing table included students Daniel Pedry and Tim Nelson, officers of Phi Theta Kappa, as well as advisor Julie Bollerud, Administrative Assistant to the Vice President of Student Services.

"Most of the students in Alpha Chi Lambda are already on track to completing their education, so we wanted to open up this event to include all the students at MCC," said Bollerud.

The Alpha Chi Lambda Chapter of Phi Theta Kappa at MCC recently hosted an induction ceremony in early November for students to be admitted. The requirements for being in Phi Theta Kappa are the completion of 12 units, a 3.5 GPA, and current enrollment at the college.

"To me, it’s important to continue and complete my education because I want a better career, although you can still be successful regardless. Also, I love education and I love learning. Not everyone has access to the same opportunity. Education is what moves our society forward. It allows us to advance, not only for survival but also from remaining ignorant," said Pedry.

Phi Theta Kappa is an international organization established to recognize and encourage the academic achievements of students at two-year colleges. Its membership supplies every student with opportunities to develop personal growth in leadership and service. It is the largest honor society in higher education in America.

"It’s important for me to complete my education because it will help me achieve my goals. I’m a geology major and want to work outside of the country, so I need my education for visas," said Nelson.

The aim of this Phi Theta Kappa Chapter is the encouragement of scholarship, the improvement of leadership, as well as the service and fostering among qualified students at the college.

Greedy Friday follows gluttonous Thursday

Stephanie Phillips
Copy Editor

E very morning, when driving out of a crowded elementary school parking lot, I see a 6 foot something, mafia-looking guy dropping off a Tinker Bell lookalike. He lifts her up in her bright pink tutu skirt with images of candy all over it. Her adorably scrawny legs only wrap half way around the man’s gut as he hugs her and gives her the sweetest, long kiss on the cheek. The only thing that ever changes about this scene are the clothes and the weather. Every day, that man is thankful for that little girl. There’s something so refreshing about seeing a good thing, it’s in our nature, as humans to want to feel good but the world isn’t exactly a feel good place. What types of things are you thankful for? I’m thankful for a good laugh at the irony of how most Americans choose to celebrate Thanksgiving.

Gluttony, greed, sloth, envy, pride and wrath are what come to mind when thinking of the Thanksgiving holiday. It’s starting look just plain evil to me, lately. Add in the Black Friday pseudo holiday and it looks like the whole thing was crafted by South Park’s version of Satan. Who on Earth could dislike place the word “Black” in front of this particular Friday? Any other color would have less sinister representations of mental images. Instead, the black plague, black death, black sheep, black swan, black dahlia, that depressing “Black Balloon” song by the Goo Goo Doll’s. It’s all bad news, man. What’s in a name? A lot.

Didn’t we learn anything from Brad Pitt and Morgan Freeman in the 1995 American thriller, “Seven?” For this holiday, it’s more like “Six” because you don’t see too much lust floating around on Thanksgiving and Black Friday. It can be difficult to get in the mood for love when your lactaid hasn’t kicked in after mom’s homemade mac ‘n’ cheese and the acid reflux is beckoning a second, unwanted taste of dinner. Pride carries on into the wee hours of the night as Black Friday encroaches on any giving of thanks. Who’s got the bigger television for the smaller price or the latest electronic device to surpass any normal human’s ability to figure out how it even works. Yeah, buddy. That doesn’t make you cooler than anybody but your pride in the accomplishment of obtaining goods sure makes you feel like your peers are mere peasants. Good for that guy. We all know one, we might even be one. Greedy-greedy-gumdrops!

I get excited when I see a huge sale sign. My wallet may be wary but that’s nothing compared to the mental and financial anguish that comes not so long after the overspending. Sparkling, bright red tags with black lines driven through the numbers that are taunted by the promise of 50-75% off. It feels like those fluorescence lights of Nordstrom are shining extra bright, just for me! I love those boots. I should get both colors in even be one.

Gluttony is the obvious of all Thanksgiving day vices. I personally look forward to Pie Week 2012, where pie accompanies my every meal. I’m seriously looking forward to what some of my family members have dubbed the P.I.E. diet. Breakfast -and pie, lunch -and pie, dinner -and you get the idea. Sweet potato, peach, silk, apple and strawberry rhubarb (that doesn’t taste like rhubarb), at least. If you are what you eat then my family must be as sweet as pie, as smooth as creme brulee, as juicy as those ham hocks and collard greens that you absolutely must have hot water cornbread with. To be an actual glutton is not always obvious. You might consider yourself a food connoisseur and have no idea that taking that little bite of white chocolate raspberry cheesecake on an already full stomach is like the gateway drug to a day of blissful bloatning.

Sloth follows almost immediately after gluttony. The two are best friends on the merry-go-round of downward spirals. Dorothy and Toto on the yellow brick road to obesity. Watching football, Al Bundy style, sink deep into the cushions of an oversized sofa with a beer in one hand while the other hand releases a painted muffin top from the imprisonment of the pants fit fine when you put them on.

Pride comes with the ”look what I made” attitude that can creep up in every family kitchen from time to time. If you have relatives who are self-taught gourmet chefs or who harbor secret recipes that they are unwilling to share due to some deep-rooted inferiority complex for fear of someone making a dish better than they, then you know exactly how catty a cook can get in a kitchen. If a sharp tongue could only cut a turkey, we might be down a couple of dishes to wash at the end of the day. No such luck.

Wrath is what puts the “Black” in Black Friday. Weapons being drawn, people being trampled to death, robbed, run over by cars -it’s scary out there! It’s a wonder that people still brave the hours-long lines in freezing weather with their children, waiting for a store to open. Leave your kids at home. Pack a taser for protection. I understand that we have all been soaking our media-driven minds with pilgrims and indians for the last three weeks but that is no excuse to act out some Oregon trail/gold rush/wild west fantasy with the woman who’s challenged you to a showdown over the last Stark Industries Lego Avengers skyscraper box set. Let it go. Back away from the box, Go home and give your kids a little more discipline and a lot less crap.

How about we all watch the eraser marks in the sky left from the wind having it’s way with the clouds. I promise to slow my roll and admire the morning sun gleaming upon the leaves of the magnolia trees that line the streets of my neighborhood. Instead of searching for my dream boots in a haze of lost morality, I vow to focus on what really counts in that 48 hours of holiday freedom. The home that my heart finds whenever I feel love and the time I am granted to give love to those around me.
Take a trip to the Hotel of Curiosities

An installation by Gilbert Neri
Open from November 13 - December 6
Reception is on Monday, November 19 from 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Talks will be on Monday, November 19 from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m.
The exhibit will be closed November 22

The Hotel of Curiosities is an installation about transience. Hotels and motels are places unique to the vast American landscape, as places of pause and rest, but also places of longing and sadness. The rooms of Hotel of Curiosity are conceptualized as containers within containers, revealing a sense of the mysterious through personal taxonomies and accumulated memory.

Safety is not guaranteed

A magazine employee and his two handpicked interns are on a mission to discover who is behind a mysterious classified ad which reads, “Wanted: Somebody to go back in time with me. This is not a joke. You’ll get paid after we get back. Must bring your own weapons. I have only done this once before. Safety not guaranteed.”

Released to DVD on October 30, 2012 “Safety Not Guaranteed” is an independent jewel inspired by a 1997 Backwood Home Magazine classified ad written as a joke by a magazine employee. This movie has a heart-warming quirkiness matched by no other. A giggle or two is guaranteed along with the impending wonder of whether or not this eccentric time traveler guy is for real.

Immaculate composition lends hand to the already gorgeous, natural lighting and pristine landscapes of the state of Washington. Add to that a talent-filled soundtrack to match the warm, yet cynical tones of the film. Tracks by The Hoppin’ Haole Brothers and Guster, along with a beautiful song titled “She’s Bound to Get Hurt” by Summer Fiction. Even the original songs, by Ryan Miller are something not to be missed.

From the producers of “Little Miss Sunshine” and director, Colin Trevorrow, “Safety Not Guaranteed” is a movie that will leave you wanting to jump into your own time machine so you can go back and experience this wonderful tale again.

It’s number 23 for 007

Sage Burke-Cabados
Staff Photographer

Skyfall, the 23rd 007 film, opened in theaters November 9. The film grossed $87.8 million in the first three days making it the strongest debut in the history of James Bond. With a $200 million dollar filming budget, two months of aggressive marketing and Adele performing the theme song, this Bond film was sure to be a hit.

Skyfall received quite a bit of positive reception, 91% by both users and critics. I believe that this is one of the best movies of the year. I think that this 007 film was one of the best created so far. The movie focuses deep into the roots of the spy and forces the viewer to ask, “Who is James Bond?” rather than “What is going to blow up next?” The movie is decently paced. The first two acts carry on as a fast paced joy-ride, while the last act is a bit slower paced and stretched as Bond and Silva’s final face-off approaches. With Daniel Craig as one of the best Bonds yet, and academy award winner Raoul Silva playing one of the toughest villains Bond has ever faced, this is a must see movie that will leave you thoroughly satisfied by the time the credits roll.

Craig is the sixth actor to play 007 James Bond. Skyfall shows a much more weathered down Bond, and as the film progresses, a psychological evaluation reveals that he is suffering from alcoholism and drug use. These aspects of the film, combined with James Bond’s worn out face and a bullet hole scarred body, show a side of 007 viewers have yet to see with other films. Raoul Silva, the film’s antagonist, is an ex MI6 operative turned cyber terrorist. Without ruining the story, the only way to describe Silva is a cunning and psychopathic super villain that is always one step ahead of Bond. Judi Dench plays the character “M.”

This is one movie you should definitely watch while it’s still on the big screen.
Spartans, what are you thankful for?

“Since I’ve been here for so long, MiraCosta’s opportunity for students, like financial aid and such. It’s like my second home. Also, the different kinds of counselors we have here. Definitely health, and family, and friends.” Elizabeth Leguizamo, campus aid.

“I’m grateful for my family and the love I feel at home, including my grandparents. Also my girlfriend and the opportunity my parents give me to go to college to pursue my dream: a professor of Kinesiology.” Trace Libby, student worker.

“A loving family and a loving girlfriend.” Jacob Coronado, student.

“My friends and family. The food I get to eat, clean water, being able to take a shower, and being able to continue my education.” Cuca Saucedo, student.

“My family. Also excellent customer service. Even when workers are having a bad day, when they treat you with good customer service, it makes you feel so valued.” Chandler Biddle, student

“My health, school, work, and family.” Garrett Schultz, student worker.

“Definitely my family (and Kamil Syed). And health and love and being done at MiraCosta this semester.” Heather May, student worker.

Students from the Honors Scholar Program visit UCLA

Storm Marquis
Contributing Writer

The UCLA College Transfer Alliance Program and the UCLA Office of Undergraduate Admissions and Relations with Schools hosted a transfer day for community college students.

At the break of dawn, students from the Honors Scholar Program (HSP) and other MiraCosta College programs such as The Puente Project boarded the charter bus to begin an extended trip to one of the most coveted institutions for transfer.

Rather than going to UCLA for a general tour of the grounds, students had the opportunity to personalize this transfer day to meet their needs. Students had free reign to gather as much information as possible to help finalize the application process this month.

The morning began with an information fair at the Ackerman Union Grand Ballroom. Every space possible was filled with stations and community college students from across the state. Students could ask questions as they shuffled between the rows and grab up pamphlets and business cards before the morning workshops began.

After the information fair, there was a more intimate opportunity for transfer students to learn about all that UCLA has to offer. The seminars ranged from financial aid information to a one-on-one Q&A with prominent representatives from various departments. “I enjoyed the undergraduate research presentation and the medical school workshop. Both speakers provided me with first-hand knowledge about research at UCLA, opportunities for summer programs, and how to develop a strong portfolio when applying to medical schools,” said Harpinder Singh, biochemistry major.

No matter what the major or career path, this excursion to UCLA was a great success for all who attended.

Get in touch with your natural self

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to learn science out in the open, instead of in a stuffy classroom with no windows? Well then you should check out the Natural Science Club. The Natural Science club is a place where students are taught about the natural sciences in a natural environment. “It’s a great club for anyone interested in sciences, the outdoors, physical activity, or just getting to know the science professors in an informal setting (which is great for letter of recommendations),” stated Nick Berry, the club’s Inter Club Council representative. The natural science club isn’t like other clubs with weekly meetings. They instead have camping trips once a semester as well as a few hiking trips throughout.

The camping trips include hikes, sightseeing, stargazing, campfire gatherings, animal watching, and many mini lectures on different topics relevant to the site they are visiting. This month, the club went to Catalina for a four day camping trip. In the past, they have also been to Agua Caliente Hot Springs in Anza Borrego, as well as Joshua Tree.

A unique thing about this club is that it’s one of the oldest clubs on MiraCosta College campus, and has had the same faculty advisor, Chris Harrell, since the 80s. Another thing is that they don’t have regular meetings. Students get involved by going on the camping trips or the hikes. It’s a great club for students with who want to be involved on campus, but because of school and work schedule, they wouldn’t be able to attend weekly meetings. For more information about the club, stop by the Student Activities Office and complete a Club Interest form.

Come catch a falling star

Fall star gazing parties are planned for Dec. 7 & 8, from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m., weather permitting. The events are free and open to the public weather permitting. Students may request proof of attendance for extra credit assignments.

See “Pancho Gonzalez: Warrior of the Court”

On Nov. 30, at 5:30 p.m. MiraCosta College’s San Elision Campus is proud to host a free screening of the film “Pancho Gonzalez: Warrior of the Court.”

Richard Alonzo “Pancho” Gonzalez was a Mexican-American became a tennis champion, breaking the color barrier that had long been a tradition of the game.

The evening will feature a guest appearance by the film’s director, Danny Haro.

The event will be held in the Student Center Conference Room and is sponsored by MiraCosta College, ASG and the Office of School Relations and Diversity Outreach.

This week’s Q & A is all about transcripts! Check it out!
Question: How do I send my transcripts to the school I am applying for?

Answer: Newest and best way—
Request your MCC transcript
ONLINE! Admissions and Records office has made it easy for students in California to access the “request for official transcript” form online! It’s easy and fast and you will have a receipt of your request.

Question: When do I send my transcripts to the university I applied for?

Answer: General rule is that the CSU’s will ask that you send your transcripts twice. One is to be sent after submitting your online application (each school will have a specific deadline) and the other at the end of the spring semester. UC’s are a bit different they will generally notify you as to when you will need to send your transcripts. Be sure to keep an eye on your portal and email.

Question: I sent all my previous transcripts to MiraCosta; will MiraCosta send all my transcripts to the university I applied for?

Answer: Unfortunately, MiraCosta
does not send transcripts that are not their own. You will need to contact every school you have attended and request the transcripts be sent, including any AP test results you have received a score of 3 or higher on.
AP test requests are directly handled
by your school.

This week I want to talk about how minor offenses can become more severe times. Traffic citations issued for vehicle code infractions, such as failing to use your turn signal, improper turn, crossing a double yellow line, or a cracked windshield can become a criminal if not taken care of. In the event a person is issued for any violation, the officer will have the person sign the citation.
The signature is not an admission of guilt. It is simply a promise to appear in court regarding the violation. The citation will indicate the time and date
the recipient will have to appear at the courthouse. The recipient can contest the citation and present their side of the case before the judge at that time. If the recipient of a citation does not want to contest it, there is usually an option to pay a fine. If the person does not go to court when promised to appear,
pay a fine, or address the citation
with the court, a judge can issue an arrest warrant. The arrest warrant is to bring the person before the magistrate (judge). The arrest will be based on the Failure to Appear on the date and time and date is a misdemeanor crime.
Failure to Appear after a date is taken very seriously regardless of how minor the original offense seems.

Therefore, not showing up to court could cause one to have a criminal record. I have made many warrant arrests. One in particular comes to mind. The arrest was related to a ticket that case opted not to pay the small fine. Not going to court, not the court to contest the appearance date.
The person now has a criminal record.
