Do I have depth and breadth in my coursework? Is my GPA competitive? Have I taken the prerequisite coursework?

Letters of Reference

At a minimum you need three letters of reference. You must connect with faculty so that they know you as a person.

Practical Experience

In many fields, research experience with a faculty member is required as part of your practical experience. Internship, work or volunteer experience in the field you want to study is important.

Graduate Entrance Exams

GRE, MCAT, LSAT, GMAT are a few of the exams needed for grad school entrance. Practice before taking, there are books and online practice exams available.

Personal Statement

This is your opportunity to let admissions know what a great candidate you’d be for their graduate program.

Prep For Interview

Interviews are common for medical, health, professional psychology, and some business programs. Other graduate schools may occasionally require one. If you’re invited to interview, follow these simple steps to prepare. Understand the process. Prepare. Anticipate the questions and learn what to expect. Practice!
